

Marble EPM Job Description

What you'll be doing

As Marble's first System Engineering Program Manager, you would be responsible for bringing our Hardware, Software, and Operations teams together to materialize one of the most complicated and integrated products of our time. The opportunity here is to own the engineering schedule and develop our new product process from the ground up. This includes managing our robot builds, which we build at our SF headquarters.

Responsibilities

- Create, maintain, and present schedules
- Big Picture - program plan and progress
- Keep the trains (SW, EE, ME, FW, MFG, Supply) running, on track, and on time
- Manage Robot Builds
- Track critical systems engineering issues, work with team to drive solutions
- Manage priorities between R&D and critical path programs
- Ensure accurate and timely communication across the company
- Engineering Process Development and Implementation
- Ensure alignment of company priorities between Engineering and Executive, Product, Operations teams

Requirements

- 3+ years of managing and shipping products
- Capable of self-managing and working with several cross-functional groups
- You are the definition of organized
- A passion for changing the world with friendly robots Bonus Points
- Background in Engineering
- Experience in any of the following:
 - Robotics
 - Consumer electronics
 - Automotive